INTRODUCING DARCELL

Since the age of five years old performing artist, songwriter and producer Darcell has enjoyed singing and performing for others. For Darcell singing is something he was born to do and something he will spend the rest of his life doing. Darcell is a native of Dallas, TX but quickly realized that Los Angeles would be where he needed to be to make an impact within the industry. During his college years Darcell stepped out on faith and moved to L.A.; unfortunately, his dreams of instant success were postponed as he found himself homeless living in his car and taking showers at the gym. by chance he was invited to sing backup for Blackstreet and he has been making waves in the industry ever since.

He began to focus on the songs he had written in high school and continuously added to his music catalogue. He also began developing his skills as a producer which eventually led him to start his own label, Crayton Entertainment, where he produced his first CD entitled Darcell. While Darcell believes that radio has been paralyzed by major corporations, he still believes that people want to hear feel good music again. Music that deposits a sense of love into their spirits, which he believes his music, does.

"Music has changed so much and I believe people are missing substantive lyrical content in their songs. My hope is that artists find their individuality again," he says.

Darcell receives inspiration from the late King of Pop, Michael Jackson and the late and incomparable Whitney Houston as well as James Taylor and Stevie Wonder to name a few. Like these artist Darcell wants to take his message of love globally. Despite being an independent artist Darcell has sold more than 70,000 CDs across the country. He has toured nationally on his Perfect Love tour, which were sold out venues. Darcell has even graced the stage with Babyface, Rafael Sadiq, and the late Luther Vandross

"To me it's time to take music to another level, to a place where love rules," he says. "My music helps people connect on a human level again."

Darcell is a performing artist who believes that it's his destiny to bring music back to its roots. He wants the world to know that love is always the answer, regardless of the question. He is an artist who truly cares about his audience and he knows that his music makes a positive influence in people's life. Darcell always takes the opportunity to maximize his potential as a performer and he surrounds himself with a team who balances the vision God gave him.

Fans can purchase his CD online at www.darcell.net, ITunes, CDBaby as well as other popular online music stores. They can also find him on Facebook.com/darcell.net and Twitter.com/hitDarcell.

"U.O.E.N.O."

What makes Rick Ross's line endorsing date rape on "U.O.E.N.O." so scary is how real it feels. The idea that someone you know could get you High up and take advantage of you is a painfully plausible nightmare. This is why people are (with good reason) up in arms over this line. Ross's twin "apologies" concerning the lyric only serve to prove how clueless he is when he comes to the danger behind his words.

When pressed about the lyric, Ross issued an apology that was pretty much as clueless as you'd expect from someone who thought it would be a good idea to rap about date rape in the first place. His apology was totally in line with our conventional understanding of what an apology from Rick Ross might look like—grandiose, full of contradiction, not to be trusted, and kind of stupid.

The Boss more or less deny rapping about rape because he didn't specifically say the word "Rape" (not true; that is not how rape works) and said he'd never rapped about rape ever (also not true, as he explicitly said the word "rape" during his track "Gunplay"). The real mansplanatory kicker was when Ross described women as, "The most precious gift known to man," which is deliriously, deliriously stupid. Like, dude is speaking as if it's man's right to be receive women from some divine patriarchal force here. That's not the way to go about showing that you've learned any semblance of a lesson in this situation. Can you say "GOOD BYE REEBOK?"

Cough Syrup - By jalisa

Lean or whatever they call it now-a-days, it's Codeine in Cough syrup that they are serving up in Sprite soda

Purple drank is a slang term for a recreational drug popular in the hip hop community in the southern United States, Its main ingredient is prescription-strength cough syrup containing codeine and promethazine Cough syrup is typically mixed with ingredients such as Sprite soft drink or Mountain Dew and pieces of Jolly Rancher candy. ,The most popular type of codeine syrup is promethazine-codeine Some users report that the large amount of sugar in drank causes them to experience weight gain, tooth decay, and other medical symptoms an they also say its a king of relaxation but only who those who know that is only ones who do it but for my self i think you must be wise and think twice be for doing such a thing as this drug''

Polo! P Diddit! The Furking just continues to kick down doors! This man is behind the scenes as well as on the scene. He should be also called "the ghost designer" because of how instrumental he has been on many projects. Projects that neither his face or name appear. Polo has been the driving force behind multiple cover and appearance opportunities for a number of celebrities. He has also been behind many major music video projects, whether it be for placement, styling, or designing, his hands touched it. This business fashion mogul has eve! had theme songs written in his honor. He has done many interviews for radio, tv, and magazines as well. Polo The Furking started 5 independent companies, with his magazine Bosses That Meet Bosses being his most recent endeavor. Look out for his book and his autobiographical documentary coming soon! - Holla.... Thx RAM
